Raytheon Generates PEP For Reliability

Raytheon Co. moved its 3,500 Andover employees aboard 70 busses yesterday to Lowell Memorial Auditorium for a gigantic PEP rally to stimulate increased worker interest in product reliability.

This and other such division rallies are the electronic firm's answer to President Lyndon Johnson's announcement of a year ago that future defense contracts would go to contractors who proved they could turn out dependable products.

Addressing yesterday's rally,

Plant Manager Harry A. Loebel said, "The President did not mince words in suggesting that new defense department awards were to go to contractors who have not only demonstrated prior ability, but to those willing to go to the lengths necessary to give the taxpayer the greatest possible bargain on his investment."

Explaining that PEP is Raytheon's way of saying Product Excellence Program, Loebel any product that is efficiently designed accurately documented, skillfully produced, highly reliable and

Four Teachers Newly Elected

The School Committee appointed four teachers Tuesday, two of them Andover women.

Elected were:

Mrs. Jane Malatesta, of Medford, a Bucknell graduate with a master's degree in English from Harvard Graduate School of Education. She will be assigned to the English department at the high school.

Mrs. Beverly Grant of Methuen, a graduate of State College, Salem, will teach sixth grade at West School. She has had previous experience in the Haverhill school system.

Miss Georgia Stanley of Andover formerly taught at West School and will return to her home town to teach the first grade at South. A Tufts graduate, she has spent the last eight years teaching in Belmont.

Also from Andover, Mrs. Barbara Johnson who is a graduate of the University of New Hampshire. She is currently working on a graduate degree at State College, Salem.

School Committee tempers flared in exchanges Tuesday over technicalities and otherwise as the policy group discussed the location of new administrative offices, an upcoming report from the curriculum coordinator, job descriptions for non-professional personnel, advance distribution of staff reports and guidance.

Supporting the superintendent, the committee voted 3-1 to keep school and town administrative offices separated with Committee-woman Barbara Moody sticking firmly to her position that arguments advanced against the union were "inadequate."

Supt. Erickson, at the committee's direction, came in with a recommendation which vetoed requesting space in the new town hall and favored an internal remodeling of Jackson School. Indicating that he considers it educationally desirable to keep school personnel housed together and separate other town government departments, Erickson also said he felt his proposal was more economical.

Mrs. Moody countered with the opinion that she does not consider it "economical" to remodel an old school into offices.

The committee's vote covered only the town hall half of the superintendent's recommendation and left the Jackson School proposal for later consideration.

Copies of the long-awaited report from Curriculum Coordinator Lauriston Ward were distributed in preparation for a second School Committee session scheduled for last night, and this led to a second hot exchange between Mrs. Moody and Erickson.

plained that she had asked for a copy of the report in advance of the long weekend and that Erickson had refused to give it to her because the report had not been distributed to other members.

Arguing that the committee had previously made it clear that it wanted printed information related to the agenda in advance of meetings, Mrs. Moody attempted to push through a motion which would require such material to be in the hands of the committee 48 hours prior to meetings.

She lost this round 3-2, picking up the support of Mrs. Virginia Cole.

Dr. Louis Galbiati denied that the committee had laid down any ground rules for the distribution of materials, and voted with William Doherty and Chairman Robert Sherman to defeat the motion.

Lauriston Ward's discussion of his report on suggestions for improving the instruction program was scheduled for Wednesday night, after Townsman presstime.

The report, however, appeared to be non-controversial, at least superficially. This led to confusion among some members about why Supt. Erickson had been unwilling to release it some weeks ago when he objected to the committee's having the report before he could discuss it with Ward. At Tuesday's meeting he indicated that it was the question of procedure that bothered him and admitted that he had not discussed the report with Ward in the extra time allowed by the committee for this purpose.

Ward's report does not deal with curriculum proposals or plans, but emphasizes instead suggestions for the sort of structure and organization needed within the system for sound curriculum development.

He suggests, for example, that school officials should not permit second-rate teachers to be "locked in" by tenure, that class sizes should be kept to a maximum of about 25, that teachers' non-professional assignments should be turned over to lay people and that some teachers should be placed on a 12-month basis.

Appearing at Tuesday's meeting, Guidance Director William Igge reported on the development of Andover's guidance program. He pointed out that the system is shortest on guidance help at the elementary level where one man handles the entire program for pupils in grades three to six.

He said testing in the elementary grades had turned up 175 students who can be categorized as "gifted," children with IQ's of 130 and over. There are 38 such students in Andover High School, Igge reported.

Other items:

• The committee accepted the Sanborn School for school purposes. The Selectmen approved the building at a meeting last Thursday.

• Dr. Galbiati asked the superintendent to consider a seven year, long range plan in his thinking about a new elementary school. He suggested it might be better to build two schools of moderate size (with core facilities) for expansion, than risk additional bussing of students from district to district within a year or two of deliverable on schedule at minimum, fits the definition.

Loebel told his employees that HAWK has an "admirable record of cost reduction, delivery schedules and quality," but he asked them to look again for ways to turn out an even better product for less money.

Raytheon's Andover plant produces the HAWK missile system, which is currently deployed worldwide by Army and Marine Corps units.

Also on hand to cheer employees on to greater efficiency were Raytheon's President T. L. Phillips, G. Grubbs, plant quality control manager, Lt. Col. C. E. Goodale, chief for the U.S. Army Missile Command, Andover branch, Richard Rogers, international representative of International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers and David McSweeney, business representative for District 38, International Assoc. of Machinists.

Reminding the workers that the lives of men around the world depend upon the accuracy of their work, President Phillips pointed out that there are 22,500 components in the HAWK which must be joined by 100,000 perfect welds and that one-half mile of wire must be threaded into the missile without a single kink.

Incentive awards are to be offered over the coming months to help keep employees alert to possibilities for money and time saving improvements in procedure and each worker is being asked to sign a pledge that he will strive for improved product reliability.

Navy Ensign Julian E. Minard, USN, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth S. Minard of 210 Main St., returned to San Diego, Calif., May 24 aboard the destroyer USS John A. Bole after a seven-month deployment to the Western Pacific with the U. S. Seventh Fleet.

Morse Speaks On OAS Issue

Congressman F. Bradford Morse (R. Mass.) told the House of Representatives last week that though he believes U. S. intervention to protect American lives in the Dominican Republic was necessary, he also feels there are legitimate areas of concern about the implementation of that basic policy.

Morse said the failure of the Administration to tell the Organization of American States of Plans for United States intervention, the inadequate explanation of the need for the large number of U. S. troops, and the weakening of the OAS role in mediating the dispute by supporting a U. N. mission and then sending in a U. S. mission have all been sources of just concern to the Latin American nations.

"In my judgment," the Congressman continued, "these deficiencies of Administration policy may have severely jeopardized the future of mutual security in the Western Hemisphere. What is needed now is a new commitment to the principles of mutual security and multilateral action at the forth-coming Inter-American Conference."

FREDERICK S. ALLIS

Amherst Honors Former Student

On Friday Amherst College conferred the honorary degree Doctor of Humane Letters on Frederick Scouller Allis, teacher and director of financial aid at Phillips Academy.

The degree, one of eight honorary degrees awarded at Amherst's 144th Commencement ceremony, was conferred on Allis by President Calvin H. Plimpton with the following citation.

"Frederick Scouller Allis of the Class of 1935, son of Fritz Allis of the Class of 1893, Phi Beta Kappa, Master of Arts at Harvard. You have served your country in time of war in the United States Navy, and in time of peace as a teacher at Phillips Academy Andover. Through your writings you have advanced knowledge, and diminished ignorance. Your luminous personality has lighted the steps of achievement for many boys. Your College is proud to salute you."

Teddy's Ideas Valid In 1965

Referring to the recent need for quick U. S. action in the Dominican Republic, Sen. Leverett Saltonstall (R., Mass.) told a Memorial Day audience in Newton that Teddy Roosevelt correctly evaluated the proper relationship between right and might 50 years ago.

Saltonstall quoted Roosevelt's 1905 Inaugural Address:

"Much has been given us, and much will rightfully be expected from us. We have duties to others and duties to ourselves and we can shirk neither. . . But justice and generosity in a nation, as in an individual, count most when shown not by the weak but by the strong."

"How true today are these words of a great leader. . .", said Saltonstall.

The public is invited to attend, and to view the art exhibition before and after the concert and during intermission. There is no charge for admission.

Synod Elects Lance Dockray

Lance Dockray, 1 Coolidge Rd., will be an alternate delegate to the 1966 Bi-ennial Convention of the Lutheran Church in America when it meets in Kansas City, Kansas next June. He was elected at the New England Synod Convention held last week in New Haven, Conn.

Dockray is on the council at Faith Lutheran Church and is chairman of the building committee.

Rev. Hartland H. Gifford also attended the convention, serving in the press room and on the credentials committee.

The Synod adopted a resolution calling on Lutherans to give assistance and support to the Civil Rights cause, and made plans for next year's convention in Concord, N. H.

How About It Arthur?

Are you playing politics Arthur?

Close observers of town affairs have been speculating for some weeks about what Moderator Arthur Williams is "up to" — why he has delayed and delayed announcement of appointments to the Finance Committee.

Now we ask publicly what many of his long-time constituents have been asking one another privately. Is Williams playing politics with the moderator's job?

Late in April, Williams denied coffee shop rumors that he would dump the present Fin. Com. and replace its men with a group heavily weighted with pre-manager town officials. He did admit, however, that he was considering at least one of the former selectmen whose names were being brandied about.

Despite denials, the rumors have persisted and numerous of those among the pro-manager forces, many of them party regulars who have stood by Williams in his GOP bids for state representative, have begun to wonder if he intends to twist the moderator's responsibility for naming the Finance Committee to his political advantage.

It is no secret that the Republican Town Committee's endorsement of Paul W. Cronin as a candidate for representative in the fall primary was a bitter pill for the veteran politician to swallow. Andover's GOP leadership had traditionally avoided primary endorsements so there was no mistaking the implications.

Williams was like a bride left waiting at the altar and there is little doubt that some of the winning votes he polled in September were his because there were Republicans who thought the Town Committee had treated him shabbily.

Those in the party leadership who had engineered repudiation of Incumbent Williams said they did so because they were convinced he had not been effective enough in Boston to win against a strong Democratic slate. They wanted a younger fighter in the ring. As it turned out, they needn't have worried. Williams trailed the other two winning candidates from 12th district, but he whipped Cronin soundly enough to give him the last laugh.

If it stopped with that, fine. But there are those who believe Williams may think he has found a way to retaliate. If he should appoint an old selectmen or two to the Finance Committee, men who have never accepted the manager form of government as a desirable fact of life, he could effectively agitate still waters. His "watch dogs" could give the Board of Selectmen finance headaches and this Mr. Williams might not mind at all — Cronin is on the board and Chairman Philip K. Allen was instrumental in organizing the party faction that worked against the representative.

Whatever Williams' intentions, he is belated in translating them into action. According to the town bylaws, he was to have appointed seven voters to the Finance Committee "upon the first day of the annual town meeting," last March 1. Failing to do this, he should have made his decisions at least in time for the April deadline which applies to other municipal appointments.

So far, however, the representative has said only that he needed time to study a list of possible appointees and that he was short of this time because of his pre-occupation with state tax measures and other legislative issues.

He is known to have asked at least two junior members of the committee to resign, presumably to permit a break with the three-year rotation system that is customary though not required. Why? Apparently he leans toward retaining certain senior members who otherwise would go off the committee this year.

All this is part of the rumor web and none of it can be verified or discounted until Williams himself discharges his responsibility. Morally, he may have forfeited his right to appoint, but legally the job is still his because the bylaws provide for no alternatives.

The present Finance Committee remains in power until discharged, but it functions in a sort of municipal limbo. It is this group that must now consider and approve or disapprove the money article for the June 21 Town Meeting.

Since a special town meeting cannot be held without the blessing of the Finance Committee, one wonders what happens if the current committee makes its decision and a new one is immediately appointed which with the authority to take an opposite point of view?

Obviously, the time has come for Rep. Williams to lay state worries aside long enough to permit at least fleeting attention to local affairs.

What Our Readers Say—

To the Editor of the Townsman:

It is ironical. The same objections voiced by Principal Miss Barrett concerning the use of Stowe School for overflow sixth graders were the objections that parents of special class students used, several years ago, concerning antiquated conditions at Jackson School.

The great difference is that Jackson School houses the retarded, the physically handicapped and those who cannot adjust to the usual classroom situation.

We parents were told that the changes which we requested would take time. Despite the fact that the State gives special aid and sets certain standards for these particular students, we were told to have patience.

I conclude that patience was not the only thing that we lacked. Our daughter, now fourteen, started Jackson when she was seven. All of her school life has been spent in one or two rooms of one of the oldest schools in town. This will be her only school life. There has been no warm water, no water cooler, only one or two sinks used for three classrooms, two toilets for three classrooms, a flight of stairs for the physically handicapped, the necessity of travelling to another building for lunch (and no hot lunch at all if they were naughty), rooms either too hot or too drafty. One improvement was accomplished after a fire in the basement alerted officials to the danger of storing equipment containing gasoline in that area!

So it goes, the helpless little outcasts who are as they are through no fault of their own are the ones who must learn to have patience!

Many of these children are not going to have the time that it seems to be taking. In all honesty, it really doesn't take much time at all. What it really takes is sincere dedication, genuine interest, and the will to go ahead and move!

So, I shall be interested in knowing just what the response will be to Miss Barrett's objections that Stowe is "hygienically unsound and does not lend itself to sound educational procedures." Here, at last, we have an expert and not just a "complaining parent."

E. E. Hopkins
6 Chester St.

To the Editor of the Townsman:

The overcrowding that has been allowed to come to pass in both the South and Central Schools, as described at a recent meeting of your Committee, reflects deplorable inaction and leadership on your part and by Mr. Erickson. Certainly, this very substantial overcrowding did not occur overnight. Why were suitable measures not taken to prepare for the growth of the student population a year or two ago?

The temporary solution proposed by Mr. Erickson and accepted by you will work hardships on the students and teachers concerned and subject them to what promises to be a totally unacceptable school year. And what concrete steps have you taken to assure that the condition does not continue after that, or even get worse?

I wish to suggest the following simple approach as much more painless than the one you have adopted. Take the number of students equal to one fourth grade class and one fifth grade class. Assign 10% to the Central School and 45% to the Sanborn School, selecting children residing closest to those schools. Since these children will be absorbed at two grade levels, it will cause only a small increase in the size of classes. The remaining 45% of the two classes would be distributed among the other fourth and fifth grade classes at the South School, increasing class sizes there within reasonable limits.

I suggest the students out of one fourth grade and one fifth grade class be reassigned on this basis, since they will have at least two years to get to know their new schoolmates and teachers well prior to graduating. To do this to sixth graders, ready to graduate from the South School, might be very hard on the children involved.

Down The Years

75 Years Ago — June, 1890

Mature plays queer freaks with the flower seeds sent out by the Agricultural Department at Washington. A man who received a package of seeds labeled "giant pansy" planted them in a flower bed and soon had a small crop of turnips, while a number of seeds labeled "double pinks" produced long-neck squashes.

The Selectmen have issued notices to the effect that all dogs must be muzzled or restrained from running at large for the next thirty days on account of the recent accidents resulting from vicious dogs.

The following notice was seen posted in a conspicuous place in town recently: "Will the one who has apostatized with my umbrella, if alive, please return the same without taking the trouble of trying to be slower than death about it. If departed this life, will he please send it back by the first train, as he will not need it where he is going to. — Sue All!"

Mrs. Mary J. (McCabe) Sadlier, wife of Thos. Sadlier, died at her home on River St. Wednesday morning of last week. She had been in delicate health for some time, but "La Grippe" hastened the end.

50 Years Ago — June, 1915

Work has been started on the cellars of the houses to be erected by Postmaster John H. McDonald and Frank McDonald on Chestnut St.

Supt. Frank L. Cole of the highway department has started work on Bartlet St. and when completed it is expected to be one of the most attractive thoroughfares in town. The roadbed from the Stowe School to Chapel Ave. is being macadamized and will later be coated with tarvia.

While swimming in the Shaw-sheen river Monday, George Germain, in the act of diving, dislocated his shoulder. He pluckily swam to the other side of the stream where his brother Leon secured medical attendance and the arm was set back in the socket. Edward Dimmock and family have moved to West Andover.

Miss Bessie Courts of Summer St. is spending several days with friends in Brookline.

Beginning next week, the grocery stores in Andover will be closed every evening except Sunday.

25 Years Ago — June, 1940

Several changes are to be made in the Central Grammar schools, with the old John Dover school being destined to serve mainly as a manual arts building. Miss Stack's and Miss Burie's rooms will be moved to Stowe's two remaining rooms.

Fifty-five students graduated from Abbot academy Monday morning with Rev. Vivian T. Roney, D.D. of Milton, giving the commencement an address favorite, "War."

Andover is the fastest growing town in this section, census figures just released show. The town has increased over 1,108 over the population figures of 1930. The total being 1,1077 now.

The anticipated registration at the to-be-reopened North School will be much less than was expected by proponents of the reopening, it was announced Tuesday night at the school board meeting. To date one child has registered for the first grade. The general trend for the entire town is upward, however, with larger first grades expected than has been the case.

Stanley Chlebowsky has been appointed janitor of the North School.

10 Years Ago — June, 1955

A million-dollar school department budget in the not-distant future was predicted this week by school committee secretary William Doherty. He based his conclusion on an average year-to-year increase of $50,000 in the budget over the past years plus the extra expenses which will be incurred for the new high school, additions to the grammar schools and increasing enrollment in all grades. . . . "There's no end in sight" — and there's no way of stopping the growth," he said.

Ten Andover girls will be among 58 students receiving diplomas from Abbot Academy next Monday morning.

Funeral services for William F. Kyle, 75 Elm St., clerk in the board of public works office, will be held this morning from his late home.

Howard A. Stockwell Jr., formerly an account executive with Henry A. Louder, advertising in Boston will be Tyer Rubber Co.'s manager of advertising and sales promotion.

The local Townsman goes all the way to Guam, where Richard Steinert and his wife Jacqueline enjoy reading the news about their home town.

Memorial Hall Library

Summer Program

Plans are being made for the annual summer program for boys and girls at the Memorial Hall Library. As in other years, reading is the chief activity. Plans in full will be announced in plenty of time.

Children's Room

A poetry exhibit and a collection of old-and-new children's books are currently on display. Poetry suggesting spring led one patron of the room to help out by creating an addition to the display on the spot. Spring, by Mary Chestnut, St. Augustine School, grade 5A reads, "Spring is the time of year when robins start to sing/ It makes me so happy I feel like doing the Irish fling./ It is also the time that children begin to shout./ Boy do they shout that school is almost out!" And this is the poem Mary came in with. "The library is my friend it helps me much in the end./ In exams and a test the books help me come out best./ When I look for a book the librarian sometimes helps to look if the book we cannot find./ We then look for another to help my mind." Besides these poems by the Andover author, the display features collections of verse for children of various age groups.

The theme for the display case is "Old and New Children's Books." Old fashioned Mother Goose rests beside a brand new edition and there are old and new style animal stories. The books of Horatio Alger, whose rags to riches stories were 100 years old, are on display with modern fiction and Laura Richards is represented too. The contrast between publishing then and now is brought out strongly in the collection of old reading books with a sample of their modern counterpart.

Recent Gifts

During the past month, gifts to the library have come in the form of money, memorial books which were selected cooperatively by the librarian and the donor, and books from the personal libraries of Andoverians. All make welcome additions to the collection. The Merrimack Valley Bird Club gave money which will be used to buy a special bird book, CRITICISM IN AMERICA and Perard's ANATOMY AND DRAWING are now on the shelf as gifts from Jean Malley's library; WAGNER, AS A MAN AND ARTIST came from Mary Angus.

Thanks to an anonymous donor, the library's collection of Audubon's manuals and handbooks for the amateur and the not-so-amateur repairman has been augmented by the following among others: ELECTRONIC DEVICES; QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS FOR ELECTRICIANS EXAMINATION; ELECTRIC MOTOR GUIDE. Other books also have come in anonymously through the "return book box."

Virginia Remington gave a number of books which will appeal to all readers devoted to cats. In fact, one title is DEVOTED TO CATS by Frank Crew.

Lady Teens

Miss Nancy Pendlebury has just completed a display of books on glamor, grooming and beauty for the young adults. The exhibit is next to the Young Adult corner of the Main Reading Room. Books and magazines from the display may be borrowed for the customary loan-period of 21 days.

State Restricts Use Of DDT As Pesticide

The few surviving ospreys along the Westport River should have a better summer this year.

And so should the birds and mammals that scuffle for a living along Massachusetts highway shoulders.

Both groups should benefit from revisions now being made in pesticide-spraying programs within the Commonwealth.

Indeed, wildlife in general across the state should benefit from these two program changes and a third program to be launched in June under the title of "Massachusetts Safe Gardening Month."

The Massachusetts Pesticide Control Board has called for a reduction or elimination of DDT use in the Westport River Valley in an effort to halt the decline of the osprey population.

In the memorandum issued by George A. Michael, chairman, the board notes that "the Massachusetts Audubon Society has approached the board to see if the board can influence the use of DDT in the watershed of the Westport River in such a way as to eliminate its use or at least to reduce its use to the lowest level possible."

"The board agrees," Michael wrote, "that such an attempt should be made (even though there is no guarantee of success) since the data available indicates that the osprey population which nests in this and nearby areas will become extinct if the present trend continues."

The board has asked all state agencies to cease using DDT in the Westport watershed and to encourage other pesticide users to switch to other pesticides.

The State Division of Fisheries and Game supported the Audubon Society request after Walter L. Hoyt of Concord, state ornithologist, studied Audubon and other investigations and agreed that DDT was a probable factor in the osprey decline. The pesticide apparently affects the hatchability of osprey eggs.

Hoyt suggested that a respite from DDT might enable the birds to "cleanse" their systems, thus restoring fertility to their eggs.

In a separate action, Francis W. Sargent, State Public Works commissioner, ordered the DPW to substitute the less-persistent methoxychlor for DDT in roadside spraying against Dutch elm disease. The DPW has been using a 12 per cent DDT mixture.

The DPW will use a 6 per cent DDT mixture this summer in foliar spraying of elms.

In his order, Commissioner

Sargent noted that "although methoxychlor is somewhere in the vicinity of two and one-half times the cost of DDT, it is rated from twelve to thirty-four times less toxic to birds and other forms of life, while comparing favorably in residual and insecticidal qualities."

Commissioner Sargent, who is well-known as a conservationist, said the order "reduces by 50 per cent the amount of DDT being applied by this department."

Despite the hazards of traffic, broad highway shoulders - particularly when well planted with trees and shrubs as most Massachusetts highways are - have become major refuges for wildlife.

Now, if Professor John A. Naegele, head of the University of Massachusetts Department of Environmental Sciences, makes significant headway with "Massachusetts Safe Gardening Month" the pungent odor of DDT may sparkle fewer of our summer mornings. The "Safe Gardener" program originates from the Waltham field station, long famed throughout America for its progressive horticultural and suburban gardening leadership. A major theme of the program centers upon more effective use of less pesticide material.

Free Car Data Costly Service

Registrar of Motor Vehicles, Richard E. McLaughlin, plans to discontinue free telephone information relative to automobile registration listings, a function which costs the Commonwealth more than $50,000, per year, he said.

Registrar McLaughlin emphasized that the regular listing service will continue to be available to all law enforcement agencies of the Commonwealth on a round-the-clock, seven-day basis, as in the past.

Henceforth, when citizens wish such listing information they must apply through their local police departments or go, personally, to the Registry in Boston. A fee of 50¢ per listing will be charged for requests emanating from other than police sources.

McLaughlin said that the expected reduction in telephone listing work and the revenue from the 50¢ fee would result in a net gain to the Commonwealth of more than $100,000, per annum. More than this, he said, about half of the clerical force now assigned to these duties could be reassigned.

Smorgasbord Menu Is Picnic Feature

A salad smorgasbord will be the chief attraction at the annual picnic of Women's Evening Circle of West Parish Church on Thursday, June 10 at 6:30 p.m., at the church.

Installation of officers will follow the supper and Mrs. Herbert Anderson will direct a program of variety acts and a songfest.

The evening's hostesses are Mrs. Ronald Gerstenberger, chairman, Mrs. Frederick Hall, Mrs. John Peatman, Mrs. Clarence Remington, Mrs. Robert Scribner, Mrs. Arthur Seikunas, Mrs. Harvey Tucker, Miss Louise Weyland, Mrs. David Troup and Mrs. Gerald Reynolds.

Principles Of Public Service

Full disclosure of costs, dignity and quality of services, and other principles subscribed to by its members is contained in a statement published last week by National Selected Morticians, an international organization of funeral directors.

Frederick E. Allen of Frederick E. Allen and Son, Funeral Directors, a local member of NSM, is one of more than 800 members who have signed the statement that appeared in the May 28th issue of Time magazine and last week's Townsman. Members of the organization qualify for election on the basis of the completeness and quality of their services, and on their agreement to abide by the Code of Ethics.

The four major principles in the Code are: Full disclosure of costs, assurance of dignity and quality, full responsibility for arrangements and respect for religious beliefs and customs.

On costs, the statement specifies: "The public should always have available in time of need or in advance, full information about funeral prices and services. The funeral director serves the public interest best when he provides such information openly and freely." Such are the principles which guide the Frederick E. Allen Funeral Service, 402 Broadway, Lawrence.

For that truly beautiful home, the modern designer depends a great deal on versatile glass for the effects he wishes to create. Extensive use of mirrors in the bathroom for instance, make this usually small room seem larger. Sliding glass doors add an air of spaciousness and light to a dining area or living area. Sliding glass mirrored closet doors for the bedrooms are marvelously convenient and absolutely breathtaking in appearance. Picture windows add to the brilliance of living areas. There is little in our homes where glass does not play a part. If this all was not designed into your home it is all still available. George Dribin, of the CITY GLASS COMPANY, corner of West and Tremont Streets in Lawrence, has all the most modern ideas in glass available for your home today. Call 683-3675 and let Mr. Dribin give you any information you need for modernizing your home with glass. Use tomorrow's materials today.

West Church Offers Help In As Council Mediator

West Parish Church has offered to mediate the differences between the Andover Council of Churches and the Unitarian Universalist Church, threatening that failure to find a compromise on the membership issue will mean the withdrawal of its congregation from the organization.

In a 57-10 vote Sunday, members backed Rev. Bruce Van Blair in his protest of the procedure used by the Council in delaying action on a Unitarian request for membership until a restrictive preamble was added to the constitution.

Council leaders said the request was tabled so that the organization could complete constitutional revisions already underway which would tend to "define" its scope, a move they thought "fairer" to any applicant for membership at a time of transition. The restrictive clause to which the Unitarians object confines membership to churches willing to accept Christ as "Lord and Saviour."

West Church officials have been in the forefront of the argument over membership and have now offered to form a committee to "mediate the differences." As proposed, the committee would include representatives from various boards and committees within the council as well as others named by the Unitarian Church. Sought is a means by which the Unitarians could accept full membership in the Council (an associate membership is possible) which would also permit churches wishing to "identify with Christ to do so without loss of integrity."

Rev. Keith Munson, Unitarian pastor, said yesterday that officials of his church are willing to meet with a committee appointed by the Council to invite his congregation to accept membership under the terms of the new constitution. But he added that by letter he has asked the invitation committee if the West Parish proposal adds any "new dimensions" to the question.

Basic to the issue is the inability of the Lutheran church to remain in the organization unless all members are willing to accept the divinity of Christ. The Unitarians, Munson said, could go along with an organization which stresses Christian traditions without the "narrow" theological interpretation.

Banker Elected Auditors' Head

Robert M. Henderson, president of Andover Savings Bank, was elected president of the Massachusetts Association of Auditors and Comptrollers at its Annual Meeting May 20 at Charter House Hotel, Cambridge.

The association, whose membership includes more than 100 Massachusetts' savings banks, provides a channel for the exchange of ideas relative to the improvement of savings bank operation and control.

Henderson also serves as chairman of the Merrimack Essex senior officers group of the Savings Bank Association of Massachusetts.

Society Seeks Local Antiques

If among your antiques you have furniture made by Andover cabinetmakers, the Andover Historical Society would like to know about it.

The society, and others in the county, have been asked to help Salem's Essex Institute locate documented examples of locally made furniture which owners hopefully would be willing to lend for a June-September exhibit.

Sought are pieces dating from the seventeenth to mid-nineteenth centuries which are labeled or signed by the maker or authenticated by the original bill.

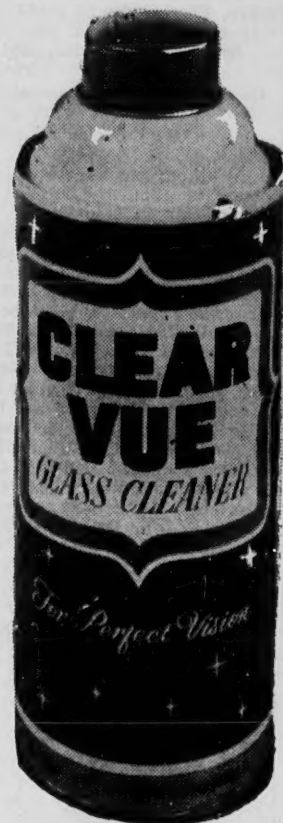

If you have items which qualify, contact the Andover society at 97 Main St.

Mr. and Mrs. Laurence Thomes of Bailey Rd. recently visited relatives in Bridgeton, Maine.
